Cobra Print Viewer is a handy utility that enables you to carefully organize and manage your print job queue, in order to accelerate the process and optimize the overall productivity of your printer devices. Key Features: • View a wide range of details about the printer • Manage print jobs and preview the documents • Easily schedule the print jobs and manage the entire print queue • Automatically clear the prints queue • Advanced print management toolsQ: Allow JavaScript to run in moderation I'm not against JavaScript, but I've noticed that some websites (because of an adblocker, adblocker plugin or simply because of the browser settings) have very long load times, sometimes never loading at all (flashiness, I suppose, since it wouldn't load CSS and other resources as well). I have no intention to block them all, but I'm mostly concerned about the ones which only have large amounts of JavaScript, most likely to achieve animations. If I'm not mistaken, I can't disable JavaScript in all browsers in my computer, can I? Thanks for your input. PS: I'm not asking for JavaScript as a language. I'm asking for advice, just like I would ask advice if I wanted to keep a cookie blocker. A: The article can be found in the Developer Center. Basically, you can set a 'allow script execution' in the chrome://settings/filter#content settings. So Chrome will ask you if you want to allow this script. Chrome will then block all other script if it is not allowed. As you said in your comment, you can't tell all users to allow script execution, only the users that choose to. High-efficiency nonradiative relaxation of a two-level system coupled to a nanomechanical resonator. We demonstrate that the relaxation of an excited state in a two-level system coupled to a mechanical resonator occurs without emission of photon(s). Such a mechanism is highly efficient ($\approx$40%) and is possible due to the intrinsic atomic coupling to the resonator via its motion. It can be used to implement nondestructive quantum state readout in quantum information experiments by detecting the ground state of the system.Q: Django ckeditor render raw form of field I'm using ckeditor = CKEDITOR(id='edit_file', toolbar:'basic',
